Mack is a kid who only eats junk food. He is a very picky eater. Mack’s friend Rick gave him some macaroni. Mack said, “Yuck!” Mack’s friend Kim gave him some corn. Mack said, “Ack!” His teacher, Miss Kelly gave him a carrot stick. Mack said, “I do not like that as my snack. I want cookies, cake, cotton candy or kit-kats. That is the only kind of food that I will pack.” Mack pulled out his sack where he had packed his snack. He ate so much candy that his stomach felt sick. Miss Kelly called his mom and said “Come get Mack, quick.” Mack missed the class picnic and the fun time at the park. He said, “From now on, I will eat more than just junk.” So if you give Mack a pickle or popcorn or milk, he will say, “Thank you! I like this snack.”
